

“Moms are the cornerstone of our business. And the everyday heroes of our lives. They are mothers, business owners, partners, wives, and friends. To their children they are carers, critics, confidantes. They have shoulders to cry on and arms that will wrap around anyone in need. Moms are more than the sum of their parts. And when they use Royco to create delicious, heart and tummy-warming meals from scratch. They are made of even more.”

It is with great pleasure that Royco announces the successful sponsorship of the “Let’s eat with Siphokazi” travel cooking show. This is a food travel show where Siphokazi travels with her food truck to find amazing local moms and their special ingredients that makes South Africa great.

Siphokazi Mdlankomo, an inspiration to SA, with a personality that South Africans have already fallen for.

As runner-up to the MasterChef SA title, Chef Siphokazi certainly captured the viewers’ hearts and made headlines internationally for showing that a humble domestic worker can overcome her circumstances to achieve her dreams.

Before making her television debut, Chef Siphokazi, who fell in love with cooking as a young girl after watching her mother cook scones in a cast iron pot over a fire in the Eastern Cape, worked for a family in Newlands, Cape Town as their domestic worker.

Siphokazi is a mom that is made of more – she uses any and all resources available to her to make her dreams come true. It’s moms like this, that inspire us, but many times they are never heard of... and they are the ingredients that make our homes, communities and country great.

She is on a mission with her food truck to find out what these South African Mom’s are made of. Starting with her own mom, she travels to meet moms from all walks of life who are doing amazing things with the resources they have: the everyday heroes we want to know and love... and have in our kitchens.

What are you waiting for?
